A Message from the President and CEO

The past financial year proved to be one of the most disruptive periods in recent memory for the international development sector. The most significant shock came from sweeping and immediate cuts to USAID, which had a ripple effect across nearly every region of the globe. The scale and speed of these reductions left many ACFID member organisations and their local partners scrambling to reassess their operations, partnerships, and strategic priorities.

During this turbulence, ACFID offered a steady hand. We guided our sector through uncertainty: coordinating media engagement to ensure the public narrative reflected the real-world consequences of the USAID cuts; elevating the voices of those most affected; and reinforcing the importance of Australia's continued commitment to international development. In parallel, ACFID represented our sector's concerns directly to Government, advocating for principled and sustained support in the vacuum left by USAID's demise.

As part of this work, in June 2025, ACFID convened a CEO Summit to provide space for reflection and strategic recalibration. The Summit brought together 62 CEOs from ACFID member agencies in frank and far-reaching discussion, which extended beyond immediate challenges to determine what's needed to survive an increasingly volatile global landscape. Long-term impact, locally led development and economic justice continue to be the sector's enduring priorities, even as the operating environment grows more complex.

Locally led development remains an important strategic priority for ACFID, and alongside climate change, was a core focus of our advocacy and support to members this year. ACFID provided practical tools to improve organisational practice, facilitated peer learning, and created opportunities for members' leaders and staff to engage deeply with these issues. This work helped build resilience and adaptability across the sector, ensuring that Australian NGOs remained at the forefront of ethical and effective development.

Another significant piece of work to support members' development practice was the August launch of the revised ACFID Code of Conduct. Last reviewed in 2018, the updated Code reflects a changing global environment and represents a timely and valuable strengthening of sector standards: reinforcing accountability, ethical practice and transparency across Australian development organisations. The Code of Conduct Committee worked closely with ACFID members over 18 months to refresh the Code, which was launched at a dedicated event attended by Australian Charities and Not-for-profit Commission (ACNC) Commissioner Sue Woodward AM. ACFID staff look forward to working with members over the coming months, providing resources and advice to embed these new standards into their operations.

The Australian Government's re-election was a pivotal moment for ACFID's aid advocacy this year. Against a global backdrop of aid cuts and shrinking government action, our Safer World for All campaign called successfully on our political leaders to protect and strengthen Australia's aid program. The re-elected Albanese Government maintained its year-on-year dollar commitments to aid – a point of celebration, and a clear statement about the value of aid to the Australian public – however, its May Federal Budget disappointingly reduced its percentage allocation to aid. Just 0.65 per cent of the Budget, or less than one cent in the dollar, is directed to international development. In a time of growing global need, this level does not reflect Australia's capacity or responsibility. ACFID will continue to advocate for a more ambitious and principled aid program that better reflects our national values and global obligations.

The year also marked a significant leadership transition for ACFID. After 15 years of dedicated service, Marc Purcell stepped down as Chief Executive Officer. His tenure was defined by vision, integrity, and tireless commitment to the sector. Under his leadership, ACFID grew in influence, professionalism, and impact. The organisation expresses our deep gratitude for Marc's extraordinary contribution and wishes him well in his next chapter.

Following a robust and inclusive search process, the ACFID Board appointed Matthew Maury as the organisation's new CEO in December 2024. Matthew's 30 years of experience in international development, strategic leadership and coalition-building signals an exciting new chapter for ACFID: building on our strong foundations, while embracing innovation and new ambition.

This financial year saw several CEO transitions in ACFID's membership. ACFID's Board was pleased to welcome Melanie Gow, Nayomi Kannangara and Stav Zotalis as newly elected members, and Shane Nichols elected as Vice President, in a Special General Meeting held in September.

We are grateful for the leadership of the ACFID Board; the Finance and Audit Committee, under Vice President Sureka Goringe; and the Code of Conduct Committee, led by Chair Alan Cameron. Leaders from ACFID member agencies drive the Development Practice Committee, Public Engagement and Campaign Committee, the Humanitarian Reference Group, and our Communities of Practice, contributing significantly to collaboration, learning and advocacy across the sector.

ACFID continued to value our longstanding partnership with the Australian Government's Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT). In February, we signed a new four-year Memorandum of Understanding, reaffirming a shared commitment to collaboration, transparency and impact. DFAT's financial support remains vital to ACFID's operations and the overall health of the sector, and we express our deep appreciation for the continued investment in our work and sector.

Despite disruptions and transitions, ACFID remains steadfast in our mission for a world where all people are free from extreme poverty, injustice, and inequality; where the earth's finite resources are managed sustainably; and where Australia is a compassionate nation acting for a just and sustainable world. Looking ahead, ACFID enters the new financial year with clarity, courage, and commitment. The challenges are real, but so too is the resolve of our members and leadership. Together, we will continue to lead, adapt, and deliver impact in pursuit of a safer, fairer, and more sustainable future for all.

GOAL ONE:

Sustainable and Inclusive Development

Chief of Policy and Advocacy
Jessica Mackenzie

This last year has been a period of dramatic change for our sector and through it all, ACFID and our members have continued to work tirelessly on policy dialogue and advocacy strategy to advance Australia's international development and humanitarian action.

The policy landscape shifted significantly over the year, shaped by several key events – not least of which were sweeping cuts to global aid funding. Beginning with an industrious period in late 2024, we welcomed publication of 16 new country-specific and regional Development Partnership Plans (DPPs), and were pleased to see the inputs of ACFID's members reflected. This represented the culmination of months of roundtable discussions, submissions, feedback and dialogue with our members, and the priorities reflected in the DPPs were a credit to the inputs of all who participated, alongside the DFAT officers responsible for drafting the documents.

ACFID welcomed the launch of several subsequent strategies flowing from the International Development Policy, which reflected the calls from our membership. ACFID was pleased to convene and amplify important messages from our members informing these strategic policy priorities for development, including humanitarian action, LGBTQIA+ inclusion and rights, gender equality, disability equity and inclusion, as well as contributing to an important guidance note for locally led development. In each of these processes, ACFID has been privileged to work with the deep expertise and mission-led agendas of our membership to produce high-value inputs to these consultative processes.

Consolidated appeals were set up for the earthquakes in Myanmar and Vanuatu, as well as for Lebanon in late 2024, which saw an increase in humanitarian need following a surge in violent attacks across the country. ACFID's members and local partners were on the ground and responding with life-saving humanitarian assistance.

As the end of 2024 approached, ACFID and our members prepared for a forthcoming Federal Election and Federal Budget, and propelled a campaign to highlight the importance of international development within Australia's foreign policy agenda.

In January 2025 came a dramatic disruption to the sector – the pause to the USAID programs, announced in an Executive Order on re-elected US President Donald Trump's first day in office, impacting over $400 million programs led by Australian NGOs and their partners alone. This decision only compounded the existing decreases in development funding announced by European donors, including Germany and France, and was followed by UK aid cuts. Experts have suggested that these cuts will see international development funding decrease by a quarter to half of current funding levels by 2027. Yet these cuts come as humanitarian needs rise significantly across the world; not only in the number and scale of crises; but the longer-term, more protracted nature of the crises occurring.

ACFID, with our members, responded rapidly to capture the impacts of these cuts on the Australian sector, and to advocate publicly for the importance of international development funding. Using a combination of surveys, briefings to Government and Parliament, media commentary, and in-depth analysis of the flow-on effects of the funding cuts, ACFID and our members were able to showcase the critical work of our sector, making the case for Australia's investment in aid, and in particular, the valuable role that NGOs play. This rapid effort was a great example of the ongoing relevance and effectiveness of collective and cohesive policy and advocacy. This was particularly evident in the way that ACFID and our members were able to generate significant public focus on the life-saving and critical programs being delivered by Australian NGOs.

ACFID was still responding to the impact of the USAID cuts as the March 2025 Federal Budget and announcement of a May 2025 Federal Election arrived. Our policy and advocacy team responded swiftly: rapidly analysing the implications of sweeping global aid cuts to Australia's development program in the 2025 Federal Budget. ACFID was able to analyse geographical shifts, sectoral implications – and the welcome news that while there was no significant increase to aid, Australia would not, like other donors, be retreating from our region.

In anticipation of the Federal Election, ACFID worked closely with partners across the Australian development sector to draw out political parties' commitments to international development. With the Australian National University (ANU) and the International Development Contractors Community (IDCC) we co-hosted a podcast that interviewed representatives from the major political parties on their development platforms. This brought important transparency to parties' stances on international development ahead of the election, and aligned closely with our Safer World for All campaign and electorate forums that were operating in parallel. May 2025 saw the Albanese Government returned for a second term, with a message of 'courage and kindness': a set of values well demonstrated in international development. ACFID and our members positioned our asks of the Government to now be about implementation and ambition in this second term: to meet the needs of the region, and beyond, and not retreat from what needs to be done in the face of global aid cuts.

In response to the escalating humanitarian crisis in Gaza and the wider region, ACFID's policy team worked with members to deliver targeted advocacy, including joint letters to the Prime Minister, Foreign Minister and Minister for International Development and the Pacific. This effort led to private briefings with the Foreign Minister to discuss humanitarian access in Gaza and the West Bank, and delivery models that work for members. ACFID worked with members on coordination and technical briefings to Parliamentarians, including a round of targeted meetings with select Members of Parliament (MPs) to renew our call for a ceasefire, as well as briefings with Australian Government officials, and sustained media engagement to raise awareness. While the humanitarian crisis in Gaza continues, the Australian Government has responded to the sustained advocacy of ACFID and others – committing to recognising the Palestinian state at the United Nations General Assembly, and has committed $130 million in humanitarian assistance to help civilians in Gaza and Lebanon since 7 October 2023.

ACFID continued to draw attention to the ongoing crises in Ukraine, Sudan, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Afghanistan and Myanmar. As our members continue to work tirelessly to respond, ACFID was pleased to coordinate a technical discussion with DFAT and some members on global displacement issues, the importance of continued humanitarian funding, and how to ensure the existing humanitarian system remains fit for purpose.

We had a busy year in the media, with 421 media mentions on topics ranging from USAID, the Federal Election Budget, climate change, natural disasters, humanitarian aid, Sudan, Gaza, Afghanistan, and development in the Pacific.

In each of these contexts, ACFID has been fortunate to work alongside the deep expertise and values-driven agendas of our members to develop strong, evidence-based contributions to key consultations and discussions.

SUSTAINABLE AND INCLUSIVE DEVELOPMENT CASE STUDY:

US Stop Work Order and USAID Cuts

On 20 January 2025, US President Donald Trump signed an Executive Order freezing most US foreign assistance for 90 days while the administration conducted a review of all US-funded aid programs. Tens of billions of dollars' worth of US-funded projects were subsequently terminated worldwide – directly affecting ACFID members and their partners. Communities around the world were impacted overnight as programs were forced to shut down, offices closed, and staff dismissed from their roles. These cuts represented far more than figures on a balance sheet: they meant the closure of programs delivering maternal healthcare for pregnant women in refugee camps, financial assistance enabling young girls to attend school, and vital water and sanitation services for remote communities. With little time to transition or adapt, many programs ceased operations almost immediately. While the initial effects were devastating, the long-term consequences will continue to be felt for years to come.

In this period of upheaval and uncertainty, ACFID provided leadership and a stabilising presence, as well as a critical voice for a sector, region and world struggling to come to grips with a new reality for international aid.

Immediately following the announcement of the USAID Stop Work Order, ACFID simultaneously coordinated information exchange and member support while delivering a unified public narrative on the impact of the order to Australian NGOs and the communities they work with around the world. This timely and coordinated advocacy helped to set the tone for Australia's role in the crisis in the months that followed, including through the critical decision-making period of the Federal Budget.

To ensure clarity and transparency regarding the extent of the crisis, ACFID conducted a comprehensive membership-wide survey on the USAID cuts. The resulting report, outlining the full scale of the impact on Australian NGOs and their partners, was shared with key government stakeholders – including the Minister for International Development, Dr Anne Aly – as well as broader sector representatives.

ACFID led sectoral advocacy through coordinated briefings with Parliamentarians on the impacts of the USAID cuts on Australian aid, with a particular focus on gender equality and sexual and reproductive health and rights. Beyond the political arena, ACFID worked with DFAT to improve flexibility of the Australian NGO Cooperation Program (ANCP), in light of the emerging funding constraints and mounting pressure facing Australian NGOs and their partners. ACFID also facilitated sector-wide representation through high-level dialogues, including the ACFID Board meeting with DFAT Secretary Jan Adams AO PSM in March 2025.

ACFID strengthened sector resilience by providing opportunities to support our membership, including through the joint delivery of a four-part webinar series with the Australian International Development Network. This collaboration enabled member organisations to showcase their programs to the philanthropic community and seek funding for work affected by the cuts. Simultaneously, ACFID retained a critical foothold on global developments across international civil society networks, ensuring our approach to the crisis was informed and in line with our counterparts around the world. ACFID's longstanding relationships with international networks, such as the International Council for Voluntary Agencies – and civil society aid peak bodies including – The Pacific Islands Association of Non-Governmental Organisations, proved invaluable during this period.

Importantly, ACFID created space for sector reflection and strategic reorientation, by convening two key summits to explore the future of international development in the wake of these unprecedented challenges. The first summit brought together the CEOs of ACFID's member organisations, while the second provided a dedicated space for small member organisations to collaborate with sector peers, engage with experts and explore the impacts of the recent shifts. These forums were instrumental in enabling the Australian development sector to collectively assess the shifting landscape and chart alternative, innovative pathways forward.

Looking to the future, ACFID continues to support, coordinate and raise awareness of the challenges and opportunities facing the Australian international development sector. Through strategic leadership and collaboration and advocacy, ACFID continues to strengthen the sector's collective voice, and foster innovation to ensure that Australian NGOs and their partners can continue working towards a just, equitable, and sustainable future in a post-USAID world.

SUSTAINABLE AND INCLUSIVE DEVELOPMENT CASE STUDY:

Federal Budget Night 2025

In preparation for the Federal Budget 2025-26, ACFID produced and finalised our pre-Budget submission in late January, in consultation with members via the Government Relations Group and ACFID's Communities of Practice. The pre-Budget submission outlined the sector's call to restore Australia's aid budget to one per cent of the Federal Budget in 2026-27. The submission also outlined climate and humanitarian action asks, in line with the increasing demands on Australian NGOs and rapidly changing development landscape.

ACFID presented our pre-Budget submission to DFAT leadership in February, and that same month took an abridged Budget 'glossy' to our annual Parliamentary lobbying round. In total, our Board delegation met with 13 Parliamentarians and/or their advisors, plus additional meetings with DFAT and the Department of Climate Change, Energy, Environment and Water (DCCEE), to build understanding and cross-party support for our Budget asks.

On Federal Budget Night – 25 March – ACFID attended DFAT's Budget Briefing, liaised directly with our representative in the Budget lock-up at Parliament, and rapidly reviewed the Budget papers. In the early hours of 26 March, ACFID published our detailed Budget Analysis, and on 27 March hosted a virtual Budget briefing for ACFID members, presenting our analysis. We were visible in the media's reporting on the Budget, with eight media mentions including in AAP, ABC, SBS and Guardian Australia.

To the sector's disappointment, ACFID's analysis shows that Australia's international development budget as a proportion of government spending for 2025-26 is at an all-time low – comprising 0.65 per cent of Government expenditure, or less than two-thirds of a cent in the dollar. Despite some small nominal aid increases, it is clear the ambition of the International Development Policy is not backed by adequate funding to deliver on new commitments. More must be done to preserve and grow the international development budget, particularly within a volatile global donor environment, and ACFID continues to advocate for stronger and fairer Australian aid.

SUSTAINABLE AND INCLUSIVE DEVELOPMENT CASE STUDY:

Safer World for All Electoral Forums

This year, the Safer World for All campaign made significant strides in building public and cross-partisan political support for restoring Australia's aid budget from 0.65 per cent to one per cent of the Federal Budget. Launched in March 2024 by ACFID, Micah Australia and Global Citizen, the campaign galvanises Australians behind a fair aid budget. As part of that work this year, Safer World for All coordinated forums with community and diaspora groups between February and April, to amplify local voices, build public support, and engage MPs in support of the aid budget. These forums also acted as a platform for communities to learn about local candidates' commitments to Australian aid for the 2025 election. ACFID helped to coordinate seven local events across Australia, with 23 candidates, and over 600 attendees.

SAFER WORLD FOR ALL

POLICY ASK

Allocate one per cent of the Federal Budget to Official Development Assistance (ODA) following the Federal Election, to safeguard critical development gains, strengthen Australia's leadership in the Indo-Pacific, and respond to the unprecedented global challenges we face.

WHY IT'S IMPORTANT

As Australia navigates an increasingly complex global landscape marked by the 'polycrisis' – rising conflict, climate change, global health threats, and shifting geopolitics – our leadership in international development has never been more crucial. The sudden withdrawal of USAID is already having devastating human consequences worldwide. In the Pacific, where Australia partners with nations to strengthen health, education, and economic resilience, any reduction in aid would be felt immediately – creating both humanitarian and diplomatic costs, while allowing other nations to expand their influence in the region.

THE BOTTOM LINE

At just 0.65 per cent of Federal spending, Australia's aid program was already far leaner and more regionally focused than those of the UK or US – and has been for some time, following the 2013 integration of AusAID into DFAT. This restructuring was followed by significant budget cuts and a sharpened focus on Indo-Pacific stability and resilience. Now, as defence spending rises, it is critical that diplomacy and development keep pace. A stable and prosperous Pacific strengthens Australia's security, economy, and long-term leadership – but cuts to aid would undermine these goals. Now is not the time to step back. This must remain a bipartisan priority, building on the temporary increases made by the Morrison Government during COVID-19 and the Albanese Government's steps to restore and rebuild Australian aid.

GOAL TWO:

Organisations for the Future

From Director of Effectiveness and Engagement
Emily Moreton

Over the course of the 2024-25 financial year, ACFID worked closely with our members and partners to support the effectiveness, accountability, and resilience of the sector. This work, aligned with Goal Two of ACFID's Strategic Plan, focused on supporting organisations to meet high standards, adapt to change, and lead with integrity in a complex and shifting global environment.

An important milestone was the launch and implementation of the revised ACFID Code of Conduct. Launched in August 2024 by ACNC Commissioner and Code of Conduct Committee Chair, Sue Woodward AM, the new Code reflects the sector's shared commitment to ethical, transparent, and locally led development. Throughout the year, ACFID supported members to embed the revised standards into their practice: providing updated reporting systems, webinars, guidance materials, and regular online drop-in sessions. By year's end, half of ACFID's 138 members had completed their reporting against the new Code, marking a strong start to this next chapter in sector accountability. This work was complemented by engagement with DFAT on the finalisation of new Accreditation Criteria for the ANCP, ensuring alignment between Government expectations and sector standards.

This year has demonstrated the power of connection and collective effort. ACFID and our members have continued to build a culture of collaboration, curiosity, and courage. These initiatives have strengthened individual organisations and reinforced the sector's shared commitment to ethical practice, locally led action, and continuous improvement."

Beyond compliance, this year was about building capability and fostering learning across the sector. Building on the success of last year's Climate Action Peer Learning Program, ACFID introduced a new Disability Equity Peer Learning Program, with 26 organisations participating. Our Introduction to the Sector course welcomed more than 50 individuals, including participants from outside the ACFID membership. Meanwhile, the Learn with ACFID platform continued to evolve, with new resource hubs on Racial Justice and Disability Equity, and two additional e-learning courses added. Communities of Practice (CoPs) remain an important avenue for fostering learning and collaboration, with three new CoPs launched in 2024-25: Data Governance; Communications, and Tax, Debt and Financial Systems Reform. This year, ACFID renewed our focus on supporting CoP Convenors, and developing guidance and updates to the CoP platform, to enhance collaboration between members.

Locally led action remained a key priority. In partnership with Peace Direct, ACFID hosted an online event that brought together 32 CEOs and Board members from ACFID's membership to explore how locally led approaches can be advanced in today's environment. Two collaborative writeshops followed, designed to help members develop their own policies and commitments to locally led development. Insights from these sessions will inform new guidance to be released in the coming year. ACFID also continued to engage with international civil society networks, sharing learnings and advocating for donor support for locally led practices.

The ACFID Conference 2024 was another highlight, bringing together 424 participants from 18 countries in an important moment of connection and reflection. Held in a hybrid format, Conference 2024 featured in-person and virtual sessions that explored the future of development practice under the theme of 'Solidarity and Resilience: The Power of the Collective'. Twenty-four sessions were delivered by ACFID members and partners. The energy and insight shared throughout the program reflected the sector's deep commitment to learning, collaboration, and continuous improvement.

In June, ACFID convened a CEO Summit under the theme 'Shaping the Future Together'. This event provided a space for sector leaders to reflect on the challenges posed by global aid disruptions and to explore adaptive strategies for leadership in a changing world. A Small Member Forum complemented the Summit and offered smaller organisations the opportunity to connect, share experiences, and consider the implications of global shifts for their work. These events underscored the importance of creating spaces for collaborative dialogue, where sector leaders can share knowledge, challenge one another, and build on the momentum of collective action to shape a stronger, more connected future.

In response to the financial pressures caused by global aid disruptions, ACFID partnered with the Australian International Development Network (AIDN) to deliver a four-part webinar series connecting members with philanthropic audiences. These sessions provided space for members to showcase their work and seek funding for programs affected by US aid cuts. ACFID and AIDN continued our collaboration over the year, delivering three Global Development Leaders Dialogues exploring issues of shared interest, including trust-based philanthropy, blended finance, and impact investing. These dialogues brought together members, philanthropists and Government to shape the future of development practice.

This year has demonstrated the power of connection and collective effort across the sector. From peer learning and CoPs to strategic dialogues and shared advocacy, ACFID and our members have continued to build a culture of collaboration, curiosity, and courage. These initiatives have not only strengthened individual organisations but have also reinforced the sector's shared commitment to ethical practice, locally led action, and continuous improvement. As we look ahead, the relationships, knowledge, and momentum built this year will serve as a strong foundation for navigating future challenges and shaping a more just and sustainable world.

Disability Equity Peer Learning Program

“The Learning Pod model was excellent for being able to work through common challenges and share practice examples. This helped make the deep dive content practical.”

Participant in the DEPLP

Between March and June, ACFID delivered a Disability Equity Peer Learning Program (DEPLP), designed to strengthen the knowledge and practice of disability equity among staff from ACFID member organisations.

The program attracted 64 participants from 26 organisations, with representation from across Australia and international locations, including Indonesia, Vietnam, Papua New Guinea, and Vanuatu. Developed in response to feedback from ACFID members, the DEPLP built on the successful methodology of the 2024 Climate Action Peer Learning Program – creating a collaborative learning environment that encouraged reflection, peer exchange, and practical application.

Participants worked in small peer groups to explore curated resources and share experiences, while webinars provided expert insights into topics such as inclusive design, partnering with Organisations of Persons with Disabilities (OPDs), and monitoring and evaluation. Participants were encouraged to develop action plans to embed disability equity into their internal practices, supported by tools and resources provided throughout the program.

The program also included ‘deep-dive’ sessions with all participants and external stakeholders including DFAT. Technical support was provided by independent advisors Kathryn James (based in Australia) and Ida Putri (based in Indonesia), and ACFID’s Disability Equity Community of Practice.

Participant feedback on the DEPLP was overwhelmingly positive. The Learning Pods were consistently identified as the most valuable aspect of the program, providing a supportive space for participants to discuss shared challenges and learn from one another. Survey results showed that 85 per cent of respondents felt more confident in implementing disability equity in their work following the program, and 70 per cent said they would definitely recommend it to other organisations. Participants also found the curated resources and practical tools highly useful, particularly for sharing insights with colleagues and partners, both in Australia and overseas.

As ACFID’s second Peer Learning Program, DEPLP benefited from lessons learned during the 2024 Climate Action Peer Learning Program. These insights led to several improvements in the program’s design, including increasing access to technical expertise, and offering a more targeted and relevant resource list. These changes helped enhance the quality of learning, and better supported participants in applying disability equity principles within their organisations.

Throughout the DEPLP, participants identified a range of areas for further action and learning, both internally and across the sector. These included strengthening engagement with OPDs, improving monitoring and evaluation frameworks, and advocating for greater organisational and government resourcing for disability inclusion. The program also highlighted the importance of collaboration and knowledge-sharing to address common challenges and build sector-wide capacity.

ACFID will draw on the recommendations and lessons learned from DEPLP to inform the design and delivery of future Peer Learning Programs. These programs will continue to support members in responding to emerging challenges and opportunities, fostering inclusive practice, and strengthening collaboration across the sector.

Preconditions to Inclusion was a really valuable session. [It] highlighted the need for budget and noted the risks of tokenism when funding is a challenge.”

Connecting Expertise and Driving Collaboration

ACFID's Communities of Practice (CoPs) continue to be a cornerstone of member engagement, collaboration, and sector-wide learning. In 2024-25, CoPs grew in both number and impact, with 25 active communities supporting members to connect around shared interests, challenges, and opportunities. Of these, 22 CoPs are led by dedicated Convenors, while three remain open forums for members to exchange ideas and resources.

This year saw the formation of three new CoPs – Data Governance; Communications; and Tax, Debt and Financial Systems – in response to emerging member interest. These new communities launched with energy and enthusiasm, thanks to the leadership of Convenors who stepped forward to guide their development. Additionally, two previously inactive CoPs – Monitoring, Evaluation and Learning (MEL) and Child Rights – were successfully revitalised, with new Convenors reigniting member engagement and resuming regular meetings.

A highlight of the year was the second CoP Convenor Roundtable, held in February. Building on the success of the inaugural Roundtable in 2024, this gathering provided a valuable space for Convenors to share their plans, reflect on their practice, and explore opportunities for cross-CoP collaboration. Convenors exchanged strategies for making meetings more accessible, encouraging member engagement, and using digital tools to enhance participation. The Roundtable also sparked several joint initiatives, including a collaborative session between the Locally Led Action and MEL CoPs on Locally Led MEL.

CoPs have increasingly embraced ACFID's online Communities Platform, using new functionality to streamline meeting invitations and communications. This has led to improved consistency in engagement and increased participation across multiple CoPs. The Platform has become a central hub for members to stay connected, share resources, and contribute to ongoing discussions.

To support member engagement, ACFID developed a Communities of Practice Guideline, now available on MyACFID. This resource outlines the foundations and benefits of CoPs, offers practical guidance for members' participation, and provides technical support for navigating the Communities Platform. An extended version tailored for Convenors captures good practice, lessons learned, and tips shared during Roundtables – which has proved especially valuable as CoPs transition to new leadership over time.

ACFID warmly thanks all CoP Convenors for their commitment, creativity, and leadership. Their work in crafting engaging agendas, facilitating inclusive discussions, and nurturing vibrant communities is deeply appreciated. Convenors play a vital role in enabling members to connect, learn, and lead, and their contributions are felt not only within their CoPs, but across the entire ACFID network.

MYANMAR COMMUNITY OF PRACTICE

This year, under the leadership of Co-convenors Sarah Hunt (ChildFund Australia) and Ben Murphy (The Fred Hollows Foundation), the Myanmar CoP continued its history of engagement and briefings with external stakeholders. The Myanmar CoP met with a number of government, intergovernmental, NGO and civil society stakeholders, including the OHCHR Special Rapporteur on Myanmar, Australian Award scholarship recipients from Myanmar, BRAC's Executive Director and representatives from Myanmar civil society. The CoP also maintained regular engagement with DFAT's Myanmar Development Section and provided inputs to DFAT's Development Partnership Plan for Myanmar. These engagements have strengthened the CoP's role as a trusted conduit between the Australian aid sector and key stakeholders – fostering informed dialogue, amplifying member voices, and contributing to coordinated advocacy on Myanmar.

ANCP COMMUNITY OF PRACTICE

ACFID's ANCP CoP is led by Co-convenors, Darren Raeburn (The Fred Hollows Foundation), Sally Miles (See Beyond Borders), Katie Chalk (World Vision Australia) and Suzanne Hayes (Global Mission Partners). This year, the ANCP CoP held a number of face-to-face events, including networking events and peer learning. Peer learning workshops were an opportunity for CoP members to share insights, tips and advice on navigating the ANCP Manual, annual development plans and performance reporting, and the CoP has formed a sub-group to exchange experiences and advice on the ANCP accreditation process. These activities have fostered a stronger sense of community among CoP members, enhanced their collective understanding of key processes, and equipped members with practical tools to navigate accreditation and reporting with greater confidence and consistency.

LOCALLY LED ACTION COMMUNITY OF PRACTICE

The Locally Led Action Community of Practice (LLA CoP), co-convened by Lauren Hallett (FemiliPNG Australia) and Cathy Malla (The Fred Hollows Foundation), provided valuable guidance to ACFID's work on locally led action throughout 2024-25. An ACFID Conference workshop session, 'The Future is Locally Led', was jointly designed and delivered by the LLA CoP and the Development Practice Committee. The workshop invited participants to explore hypothetical future scenarios for the sector, providing a safe space to have difficult conversations and inspire creative solutions. The LLA CoP also provided input and support for a two-part Locally Led Action Policy Writeshop that supported ACFID members through the process of drafting locally led action policies and organisational statements. Twenty-two ACFID members joined the Writeshop, and the outputs from the sessions have informed a guidance note as a lasting resource.

ACFID CEO Summit: Shaping The Future Together

Australia Foundation.

On 13 June, ACFID convened a CEO Summit at La Trobe University's Bundoora campus in Melbourne, bringing together more than 70 leaders from across the sector for a day of reflection, strategic dialogue, and collective visioning. Against the backdrop of unprecedented global aid disruptions – most notably the sweeping cuts to USAID – the Summit provided a vital space for sense-making and recalibration.

The day opened with messages from international civil society leaders, who shared firsthand accounts of how aid cuts were affecting local organisations and communities. Their reflections underscored the urgency of rethinking traditional development models and amplifying local leadership.

Bridi Rice, CEO of the Development Intelligence Lab, delivered a keynote that framed the Summit's strategic lens. She identified three major disruptions shaping the future of development: climate change, rising fragility and geostrategic competition, and the accelerating complexity of the information and technology environment. Her call to action was clear: organisations must choose whether to maintain the status quo, adapt where it matters most, or transform into the development partners that the moment demands.

A panel discussion followed, exploring the implications of the global reset for NGOs. Contributors, including Melissa Conley Tyler (Asia-Pacific Development, Diplomacy and Defence Dialogue; AP4D), Cameron Hill (ANU Development Policy Centre), Simon Lewis (Australian International Development Network), and Lisa Denney (La Trobe University), challenged the sector to confront declining legitimacy in traditional aid systems and to embrace new models of philanthropy, impact investing, and justice-oriented approaches. The conversation highlighted the need for NGOs to evolve or risk being sidelined by more agile actors.

Throughout the day, breakout sessions enabled participants to dive deeper into four critical themes: NGO sustainability, strategic purpose, the future of aid beyond ODA, and locally led development. These discussions surfaced shared concerns as well as ideas for collaboration, innovation, and systems reform. Participants explored how ACFID could support members in navigating these shifts.

The Summit also reinforced the importance of engaging with the Australian public and government. Attendees reflected on the success of the Safer World for All campaign and discussed how to build on this momentum through storytelling, solidarity-based campaigns, and strategic partnerships. The role of NGOs as trusted, value-driven partners to Government was reaffirmed, with calls for longer-term funding, reduced compliance burdens, and recognition of the sector's unique strengths.

As the sector continues to face uncertainty and transformation, the CEO Summit reinforced the importance of collective reflection and shared learning. The insights and ideas generated through the breakout discussions will inform how ACFID works alongside our members in the months ahead, supporting them to adapt, collaborate, and evolve in response to a rapidly changing environment. The Summit was a step in an ongoing journey to ensure that Australian development organisations remain resilient, relevant, and grounded in their values.

Enablers

Four enablers are key to the achievement of ACFID's Strategic Plan 2020-2025: Engaged Members, Positive People and Culture, Strategic Partners, and Sustainable Organisation – which has within it the further sub-items of Governance and Risk, Financial Performance, Information Management and Technology, and External Communication. No enabler is an end in itself; rather, each supports the achievement of the goals of the Strategic Plan. These enablers equip ACFID to adapt and respond to changes in the strategic landscape over the Strategic Plan period.

SUSTAINABLE ORGANISATION

DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION PROJECT

ACFID continues to strengthen our systems for managing information and engaging with members. This year, we created an area where members can self-serve based on their needs, which streamlines administrative processes and saves members' time. At ACFID's online membership portal, members can update staff details, register for events, update progress against Code reporting, and more. Additional website work happened this year with the launch of ACFID Shop. This new space allows the sector to advertise jobs, training and events, and provides a trusted space to source consultants.

GOVERNANCE AND RISK

The Board had the important task of recruiting a new CEO to lead ACFID with the departure of Marc Purcell after 15 years of service. The process was thorough and considered, taking into account both the needs of the organisation and those of the sector as we move into greater complexity across the globe. Coming from the membership, former Tearfund CEO Matthew Maury transitioned smoothly from Interim CEO into the CEO role permanently in May, with minimal disruption to ACFID's ongoing work. The Board also began its search for a new President in preparation for the departure of Susan Pascoe later this year, as she concludes her second of two terms as Board President. We welcomed three new Board members in June – Melanie Gow, Nayomi Kannangara, and Stav Zotalis: three deeply experienced women whose expertise will serve ACFID well into the future.

ACFID also worked closely with DFAT to renew our Memorandum of Understanding for another five years, cementing a strong partnership that brings together the capabilities of Government and Australian NGOs to enhance effectiveness and impact in their international development and humanitarian activities.

FINANCIAL PERFORMANCE

ACFID's financial stability remains a focus, and this year we engaged external partners, whose contributions helped offset the financial cost of providing events and engagement opportunities to members. We appreciate the support of organisations including our corporate partner StoneX, NGO Recruitment and BrennanIT, whose support enabled ACFID to provide more for members, while bringing new service delivery actors into our sector.

ACFID's Finance and Audit Committee continued to support and strengthen ACFID's financial performance, and we are grateful for their dedication and sound advice.

EXTERNAL COMMUNICATION

This year, ACFID enhanced the marketing functions of our member engagement platform, which improved delivery of the ACFID Weekly and Sector News newsletters. These improvements have strengthened targeting, tracking and data insights, with newsletters achieving opening rates above 70 per cent.

SUBSCRIBE

Subscribe at acfid.asn.au/subscribe-to-acfid

Our External Relations Coordinator provided valuable insights and analysis across ACFID's social media platforms, enabling more targeted messaging and media releases. ACFID reached 20,361 followers on LinkedIn – an increase of 25 per cent over the year, with an engagement rate of 8.6 per cent. This growth was driven by a content strategy focused on delivering valuable, timely and visually engaging updates for our audience, including the introduction of infographic videos to simplify complex information and boost engagement.

POSITIVE PEOPLE AND CULTURE

Changes in ACFID's management team and Board composition this year presented a time of transition for staff, but we maintained stability and focus, providing space for incoming CEO Matthew Maury to develop a deep understanding of ACFID's nuances before beginning to lay the groundwork for renewal and reform.

During this time, ACFID prioritised the psychosocial safety of our staff by integrating a review into the ongoing cycle of staff pulse surveys, with follow-up actions being co-designed in collaboration with the People and Culture Group. In the second half of the financial year, ACFID reviewed and improved the collection of unique benefits we offer staff – including additional leave over Christmas break, increased parental leave provisions, and an ongoing commitment to flexible work practices.

This year's Conference invited delegates to explore how collective action, empathy and partnership can strengthen and transform the global development sector."

ENGAGED MEMBERS

CONFERENCE 2024

From 22 to 24 October 2024, ACFID was delighted to welcome delegates virtually and in-person at The Roundhouse, University of New South Wales, Sydney, for Conference 2024 – 'Solidarity and Resilience: The Power of the Collective'. The hybrid format once again proved to be an engaging way to connect people from across Australia and around the globe, ensuring the event continues to be an inclusive and accessible forum for a wide audience.

As the world continues to navigate intersecting crises – from climate disasters to shrinking civic space – this year's Conference invited delegates to explore how collective action, empathy and partnership can strengthen and transform the global development sector. It was a timely opportunity to come together, share experiences, exchange knowledge, and reaffirm the solidarity that underpins our work.

The program offered an inspiring lineup, opening with a beautiful performance by six Pacific activists, whose performance symbolised the displacement of communities by the impacts of climate change. Keynote speakers included Arthur Larok, Secretary General of ActionAid International; Anabel Cruz, Civil Society Co-Chair of the Open Government Partnership Steering Committee; and Gabriele Visentin, European Union Ambassador to Australia. Across the two days, delegates engaged in 23 concurrent sessions, covering diverse and pressing topics such as climate justice, Indigenous voices, disability equity, feminist climate movements, financial inclusion, and locally led resilience.

The program made deliberate time for networking, including the annual conference dinner and an interfaith breakfast, which provided a reflective and meaningful space for uncommon connection and shared experiences. These moments allowed delegates to not only engage with the conference's insightful content, but to deepen existing relationships and build new links.

Hosted by our engaging emcees, Renee Cremer and Soman Moodley, Conference 2024 brought together a vibrant mix of leaders, practitioners and advocates from across the sector, creating a platform for exchange, collaboration and forward-looking conversations for our shared work.

NEW ACFID MEMBERS

At this year's Annual General Meeting, ACFID welcomed four new Full Members and one Affiliate Member into our community:

1. MAF International
2. Good Neighbours Australia
3. Dana Asia
4. Taking Paediatrics Abroad
5. Nossal Institute for Global Health (Affiliate)

ACFID CONNECT

ACFID provided members with a wide range of member-only ACFID Connect Sessions throughout the year. In collaboration with DFAT, we hosted sessions on ANCP Insights, Disability Equity in ANCP Accreditation, and the International Disability Equity and Rights Strategy. ACFID member CEOs and Board members were invited to an evening virtual Roundtable, 'Adapting to the Future: Leadership in Locally Led Action and Decolonisation', with international guest speaker, Dylan Matthews. Members also heard from representatives from Charter for Change, in a briefing on their Due Diligence Passporting Tool and Pilot initiative, which has led into further discussions about passporting in CoPs, other learning events and between members.

STRATEGIC PARTNERS

AUSTRALIAN CIVIL-MILITARY CENTRE

The Australian Civil-Military Centre (ACMC) works to strengthen Australian and regional civil-military police capacity and capability to respond more effectively to crises and contingencies. The ACMC delivers a unique capability to government and civil society partners, and measures its success by how well Australia mobilises its national efforts to promote disaster resilience, peace, security and stability. ACFID supports the secondment of a senior policy advisor to the ACMC. The advisor works with ACFID members to ensure NGO perspectives are considered in the development of Australia's civil-military capabilities to prevent and respond to disaster and complex emergencies overseas and domestically.

This year, the Policy and Advocacy Advisor contributed to an International Humanitarian Law conference, facilitated a Humanitarian Assistance and Disaster Relief workshop in the Pacific, and presented at the bi-annual Australian Federal Police pre-deployment training for officers posting to overseas missions. In addition, a workplan is underway for new initiatives, led by the Policy and Advocacy Advisor, including short-term research secondments into ACMC and opportunities for ACFID members to access Defence short course training.

Asia-Pacific Development, Diplomacy & Defence Dialogue

The Asia-Pacific Development, Diplomacy & Defence Dialogue (AP4D) is a tripartite initiative hosted by ACFID that has received funding from the Australian Civil-Military Centre and DFAT. It creates a new dimension in Australia's international policymaking by bringing together experts from across the international policy communities in Australia and the region. AP4D's work is rooted in the need for greater coordination between not only the different tools of Australia's whole-of-government statecraft, but whole-of-nation stakeholders. As a platform for practical, future-facing ideas, AP4D combines the skills and experience of each development, diplomacy and defence to achieve new insights, develop new ideas and promote strategic collaboration around shared interests. AP4D has been a pioneering voice since it was established in 2019, and – as reflected in key policy documents and ministerial speeches – helps shape the national conversation.

AP4D continued to build on this work in 2024-25. In February, AP4D commenced a pilot program to increase engagement with and understanding of Australia's development program among the business, education and philanthropy sectors. As part of this program, AP4D already engaged with more than 900 experts and policymakers across events, consultations and forums.

As part of the Blue Security consortium, AP4D organised and delivered the inaugural Malaysia-Australia Track 1.5 Maritime Cooperation Dialogue in Kuala Lumpur in November 2024. And in February, AP4D co-hosted a symposium at Parliament House with Griffith University to look at developments in Australian diplomacy over the past decade and explore future goals, directions and challenges.

This year also marked the successful completion of Stage II of Shaping a Shared Future, an AP4D program funded by the Australian Civil-Military Centre. Consulting with more than 500 experts across two years, this collaboration resulted in the production of 12 papers, more than 20 online and in-person events, and dozens of articles and media engagements. The program briefed more than 1000 policymakers and officials across 90 private briefings and presentations.

Ministers, senior officials and commentators likewise continue to frame Australia's international engagement in terms of whole-of-nation statecraft. In 2024-25 this included the Prime Minister, Treasurer, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and Minister for Industry and Innovation, among others. Such framing is similarly embedded within key policy documents released in the last 12 months – including the International Gender Equality Strategy, Humanitarian Policy, Australia in the World – 2025 Snapshot, and Sports Diplomacy Strategy.

Public interest in AP4D remains strong, with almost 4,000 people attending or viewing recordings of AP4D events over the past 12 months. AP4D regularly contributes to the public debate by promoting the results of papers on core AP4D themes. In 2024-25 AP4D staff published 61 articles and blog pieces, in addition to 36 speaking engagements and 63 media mentions.

By advocating for the need to respect, resource and coordinate all elements of statecraft, AP4D continues to contribute to the ACFID aim of elevating development to the heart of foreign policy.

Learn more about AP4D at www.asiapacific4d.com

The Australian Government is committed to advancing gender equality both at home and internationally. We use all tools of statecraft to advance gender equality for a more peaceful, stable and prosperous Indo-Pacific.”

AP4D CONSULTATIONS AND SUBMISSIONS

AP4D published four papers in 2024-25:

- What does it look like for Australia to Promote Compliance with International Humanitarian Law and Protection of Civilians
- Green Energy Statecraft for Comprehensive National Security

- Toward Comprehensive Green Security for Asia and the Pacific

AP4D also made submissions to two reviews and inquiries:

Communities of Practice

A Community of Practice (CoP) is a group of people who come together to share, learn and collaborate. They are held together by a common interest in a topic, and are driven by a desire to solve problems and develop a body of knowledge together.

CoPs play a vital role in contributing to ACFID's broader change agenda – helping to realise our aim to see members as influential agents, leading development and humanitarian practice, and NGO effectiveness and accountability.

CoPs are member-led and -run, with the support of two Co-convenors or more, and the energy and commitment of interested members. They interact through MyACFID's collaborative platform; an online space for discussion, planning and information-sharing.

ACFID is grateful to the Convenors from our membership who volunteer to lead these CoPs.

ACFID Awards

ACFID Awards recognise the achievements of those who have made a significant impact and difference in the aid and development sector over the last year.

THE ACFID MEDIA AWARD

Presented to SBS Australia for Finding Yusuf: an investigative documentary about missing Australian schoolboy, Yusuf Zahab, who was taken into Islamic State territory in Syria at 12, imprisoned without charge, and later declared to be dead. Over 18 months, SBS' Dateline followed Yusuf's story, and was the first to report he had been found alive – bringing hope to his family, and raising vital questions about justice and human rights. The documentary sparked national debate about the Australian Government's inaction on repatriating women and children from conflict zones. Congratulations to Colin Cosier, Agnes Teek, Georgina Davies, Simon Phegan and Louis Dai for their outstanding work.

THE OUTSTANDING CONTRIBUTION TO THE SECTOR AWARD

The ACFID Outstanding Contribution to the Sector Award recognises individuals or organisations that have made a significant and lasting impact on the Australian aid and development NGO sector. It honours contributions that benefit the sector as a whole and extend beyond paid roles, including voluntary work. Matthew Maury, former CEO of Tearfund Australia, was recognised for his exceptional contributions to the international development and humanitarian sector. His leadership at Tearfund and as the inaugural Chair of the Emergency Action Alliance reflects his deep commitment to strengthening the sector. With more than 30 years' experience in relief and development, Maury has played a pivotal role in advancing humanitarian action and international development in Australia and beyond.

THE SIR RONALD WILSON HUMAN RIGHTS AWARD

KEN DAVIS

An esteemed elder of the LGBTIQIA+ community in Australia, Ken Davis was instrumental in implementing HIV programs across Cambodia, Vietnam, Zambia, Zimbabwe, and South Africa, managing Australian aid initiatives throughout the 1990s. Davis helped establish community health networks in Australia and abroad during the 1980s and early 1990s: a time when most NGOs were not actively supporting HIV and AIDS campaigns. His work included education, awareness-raising, and training for healthcare workers in countries including Indonesia, Vietnam, the Philippines, and Zimbabwe.

DR ALI REZA YUNESPOUR

Celebrated for his long-standing volunteer work with the Indigo Foundation, Ali Reza has coordinated education projects in Afghanistan that have empowered communities and benefited more than 5,000 students in Ghazni Province. Over more than 15 years, he has worked closely with local partners to improve access to education, strengthen teaching capacity, and promote community-led development. His contributions have helped establish sustainable education programs in challenging environments, ensuring long-term benefits for students, teachers, and communities alike.

PUBLIC ENGAGEMENT AND CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

The Public Engagement and Campaign Committee (PECC) supports the realisation of ACFID's vision, and the delivery of our Advocacy Agenda, as set out in the Strategic Plan 2020-2025. The PECC's primary objective is to unite ACFID members to engage the public and to campaign for better international development by Australia. The PECC works towards this objective by championing the work of the ACFID membership and the impact of the Australian development program to the Australian public.

In 2024-2025, the PECC launched the sector's new public-facing campaign: Safer World for All. The campaign calls on the Australian Government to restore development spending to one per cent of Federal expenditure. The campaign acknowledges that Australia is one of the safest, healthiest, and most generous countries in the world, but our aid contribution has fallen to only 0.65 per cent of the Federal Budget. Rebuilding Australian aid to the modest level of one per cent of Federal spending is a small step that would have a huge impact.

The group aims to drive cross-sector collaboration in its efforts to influence Government and communicate effectively with Government officials and decision-makers. Members come from a range of agencies and bring expertise in different areas including policy, campaigning, advocacy, communications and research.

Financial Report for the Year Ended 30 June 2025

At the close of the financial year, ACFID recorded total revenue of $4.17 million in 2024–25, with expenditure of $4.31 million, resulting in a deficit of $141,723. Our main sources of income remain membership and Code of Conduct fees, alongside our DFAT core contract.

The organisation remains in a strong financial position with net assets of $3.29 million, including reserves of $1.43 million and retained earnings of $1.85 million. At year's end, ACFID held $1.42 million in cash, and maintains a strong current ratio of 3.84 and debt to equity ratio of 0.16, which continues to support a going concern.

We are grateful for the support and guidance of the Finance and Audit Committee throughout the year.
